BODIES OF PENNYS FOUND BY BOYS

Walter E. Duke, Who Has the Bones in Charge, Tells the Story.

NOTHING TO INDICATE REMAINS ARE INDIANS

Bodies Are Identified as Those of the Two Murdered

The true story of the finding of the supposed remains of Ezra and George eight years ago in the Frisco hills, has the skeletons were those of Indians (as was the verdict of the Frisco coroner)

"The bodies were not buried Indian fashion," said Mr. Duke, "but were merely thrown in on the rocks, the larger bedy on top of the smaller, and both had been covered with a blanket, which was weighted down with a few stones.

"Both skulls show they had been struck with some blunt instrument, and blood stains were plain. The hair found on the skull of the smaller skeleton is identical with that of George Penny's, is described by Mrs. Penny.

"Mr. Penny was deeply interested in phrenology, and at one time had a phrenological chart taken of his hend, and its measurements tally exactly with and its measurements tally exactly with the measurements of the skull supposed to be that of the elder Penny.

Remains Found by Boys.

remains were not found by Edward Penny, as reported, but by two hoys who were coyote hunting. They chanced across the bodies and reported the find to the officers. I was sent to investigate by Sheriff Black, and the skeletons are now in my care. Experts who have examined the remains my they are both the bones of males, and of white men.

Besides all this, the blanket found over the bodies, a horse bell and vest and fragments of clothing have been positively identified as belonging to the Pennys when they started across the Frisco hills in 1898."

Frisco hills in 1898."

Sheriff Black is due to arrive in Salt Lake in a few days with George and Jack Harper and Mary Armstrong, who were arrested in Golden, Colo. on charges of the murder. They were seen on the evening of October 18, 1898, passing the camp of two sheepherders in company with the Pennys. Later that night they were seen returning with the Penny outfit, together with their own, but the Pennys were not with them.

The Harper party was arrested, but later released owing to the inability of the State to produce the bodies of the alleged murdered men.

D. C. Dumbar speaks.

D. C. Dumbar succeeded Mr. Sullivan. In part, Mr. Dumbar said: "If this campaign was inaugurated for the purpose of fighting the Mormon church, as a religious organization. I would not be here tonight. How a certain part of the press in this city can consistently and truthfully print statements dully that the American party is benightrupting the city and retain the respect of sane, thinking people is beyond my understanding."

Speaking of the evident purpose of the church politicians who, having practically acknowledged the election of the American city ticket, were straining every nerve to lie the hands of Eransford and his friends in the City Council by electing Councilmen inimical to the interests of the Americans, Mr. Dunbar said: "Where will you people of the Second precinct be if you elect Bransford and the rest of the city ticket, and place Councilmen not in accord with his polley? Regarding the cry that the American party is wasting the funds of the city. I wish to say that one-third of the population of this city is known as American and it pays two-thirds of the taxes. Mayor Bransford pays more taxes than do all of the candidates of, the Republican party put together. A man of such large interests in this community is not going to do anything that will reduce the value of his real estate."

In later incoherencies regarding her axertion that Mrs. Frederickson was poisoned by relatives for her property, Mrs. Schopp qualified her statements, entirely exonerating relatives of blame for the woman's death. She asserted positively that none of the woman's relatives, who live in Parley's canyon, were near Mrs. Frederickson at the time of her death or for hours prior thereto.

According to Mrs. Schopp's and the husband's stories, Mrs. Frederickson was addicted to the use of cocaine and morphine in heavy quantities. Tuesday she returned from a visit with her mother, commonly known as "Mother" Dudley, in Parley's canyon. She complained of being ill and Wednesday morning was attacked by an irresistible craving for "dope." She asked her husband to get her some of the poison and Mrs. Schopp, who lives in the same house with the Fredericksons, gave Frederickson money with which he bought cocaine and morphysical statements.

into her arms. Soon after she administered the poison she told her husband she was dying. Death came about 11:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Judge Smith learned of Mrs. Frederickson's death and made an investigation of its probable cause. He examined her body and found it covered with sores, made by the needle with which the co-caine was injected into the system. It is the opinion of the coroner that there was no suicidal intent, but that the woman took an overdose of the poison. An inquest is not likely.

Frederickson was under the influence of liquor in Judge Smith's office Wednesday, but was not as talkative as Mrs. Schopp. Judge Smith visited the Frederickson home and found that deplorable conditions prevail there, especially in the matter of cleanliness.

Mrs. Frederickson was forty-nine years old. The body lies at Joseph William Taylor's undertaking parlors.
